The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 41 and 42 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Kinsley (U.S. Patent 3,026,991) or Schneider (U.S. Patent 4,566,583).

Kinsley and Schneider both show a variable pitch screw that increases in a direction towards an outlet zone.

Re claim 42, portions corresponding to pitch values can be clearly identified.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 33-40 and 43-46 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over British Patent Application 2,189,205 in view of Schnider or Kinsley.

The British Patent Application shows a screw feeder arranged within a hopper. Not disclosed is a variable pitch which increases towards an outlet zone. However, shown by both Schneider and Kinsley is the concept of using a variable pitch screw which increases in pitch towards an outlet zone. To change the screw of the British Patent Application so as to be variable and increase towards an outlet zone would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art as it is extremely well known in the field of screw conveyors to use variable pitch screws to vary or meter output. The British Patent is disclosed as being used for a bulk quantity of loose product. The British Patent also fairly suggests in column 1 that the shown device is suitable for use with variable pitch screws.

Art Unit: 3651

Re claim 34, the screws of Schneider and Kinsley each clearly have portions of different values.

Re claims 35-38 and 43-46, the claimed ranges for different portions fall within the teachings of Schneider and Kinsley and would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art in order to obtain a desired spacing at an outlet zone. It is well known and conventional to vary pitch to obtain a desired outflow.

Re claim 39, the screw is arranged below a hopper.

Re claim 40, shown is a hinged side element 14.

Applicant's arguments filed 12/07/2006 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. The British Patent is used for bulk quantities of loose material. Kinsley and Schneider both convey loose items as is broadly claimed.

THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
